

Contact Allison Hudgins
Telephone 678.364.3748
Email Allison.Hudgins@usg.edu
Website <http://www.georgiaarchives.org/>

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
June 30, 2017

UPCOMING EVENTS AT THE GEORGIA ARCHIVES

Morrow, GA, June 30, 2017 – Tomorrow, the Archives will hold a special one-day document display and next month, the Georgia Archives will host our monthly Lunch and Learn Lecture. On Saturday, July 1, in celebration of Independence Day, the Georgia Archives will have a special showing of Georgia's recorded copy of the Declaration of Independence. On Friday, July 14, our Lunch and Learn program will be on Native American ancestry research. The following Lunch and Learn Lecture, on Friday, August 11, will be on preservation efforts at Oakland Cemetery. All events are free and open to the public. No registration required.

Saturday, July 1, 8:30am to 5:00pm, in celebration of Independence Day, the Georgia Archives will exhibit Georgia's recorded copy of the Declaration of Independence in the outer exhibit room behind the welcome desk. Archives staff will be on hand to answer questions.

Friday July 14, 2017 at 12:00 noon, Yvonne Mashburn Schmidt, Certified Genealogist[®], will present "About That Native American Grandmother: Clues That Help & Hinder Our Family Stories." Stories of Cherokee ancestry are common among families whose ancestors were established in the southeast prior to the Trail of Tears. An estimated forty-four percent of native southerners believe they have Indian ancestry. Many feel strongly compelled to accept the challenge to either document or disprove these stories, but are uncertain about how to proceed. Because genealogical research includes placing our families in legal and social context, the discussion will begin with a very brief history of the state of Georgia's interaction with three tribes that resided in Georgia - the Creeks, Cherokees, and Natchez - and how descendants of these native people were affected by the government's legal maneuvers. Using three case studies of families who have native ancestral stories and whose ancestors were racially identified as black and white, attendees will gain guidance about how to conduct Native American research and how to recognize the clues that can be used as evidence and provide credibility for their stories. Genetic genealogy has become a valuable tool, and today's families with native stories often DNA test with the hope to use these results to accept or reject evidence of this ancestry. The use of DNA results as evidence of native ancestry will also be discussed. No registration required, free and open to the public.

Friday, August 11, 2017, Ashley Shares, Preservation Manager at the Historic Oakland Foundation, will present the following Lunch and Learn Lecture, "Protecting the Treasures of Historic Oakland Cemetery."

The Georgia Archives is a unit of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia. The Georgia Archives identifies, collects, manages, preserves, provides access to, and publicizes records and information of Georgia and its people, and assists state and local government agencies with their records management. This work is done within the framework of the USG's mission to create a more highly educated Georgia.

###

For more information, please contact Allison Hudgins at 678.364.3748 or email at Allison.Hudgins@usg.edu.

Georgia Archives – 5800 Jonesboro Road, Morrow, Georgia 30260 – 678-364-3710